- Information about your device and internet connection, including your IP address, operating system, and browser type.

The information we collect automatically may include personal information, or we may maintain it or associate it with personal information we already have. It helps us to improve our Site and to deliver a better and more personalized service, including by enabling us to:

- Estimate our audience size and usage patterns.

The technologies we use for this automatic data collection and tracking may include:

- Server Logs – Server logs automatically capture details of your online interactions with us, such as the time and date of your website visit.
- Cookies – A cookie is a small file placed on your computer's hard drive. You can refuse to accept cookies by changing your browser settings, but this may limit access to parts of our Site. If you don't adjust your browser settings to refuse cookies, our Site will place and use cookies. SDKs may be used to track users with an advertising ID (such as Apple’s IDFA and Google’s Advertising ID) to identify your mobile device over time for advertising purposes. They can also be used to collect information such as geolocation or IP address.
- Third Party Plugins – Plugins from other companies, including social media companies (for example, through a “Share” or “Like” button). Plugins might collect data about your page visits and share it with the plugin creator, even if you do not click on a button. Their use is governed by the creators' privacy policies and terms.
- Session Replay/Heatmaps – Session replay technology uses trackers added to a user’s browser to record how they navigate a website (mouse clicks, movements and scrolling) and interact with content. A heatmap is a visual representation of user interaction on a website, highlighting sections with more clicks and attention.
